Title : Philippine Cuisine: History & Identity

Guest : Ria Tinio (Philippine)

Abstract : The Philippines is considered a “melting pot” of culture and influences, due to its long colonial history and strategic position as a trade hub since the ancient times. This rich background is reflected onto its cuisine and food culture. To this day, many Filipinos consider food to be important to their identity as a Filipino. However, what exactly is Filipino food? How did it develop? Why is it not as common as other cuisines internationally? This speech aims to give some ideas on this, as well as a detailed introduction of the Filipino’s favorite pastime—eating.
